

NAME: Darryn DiFrancesco, M.A.
darryndifrancesco@gmail.com

ROLES: Research Associate, C-Change Canada
PhD Student, Department of Sociology
University of British Columbia

DISCIPLINES: Communication; Global Studies;
International Development

KEYWORDS: sociology of knowledge; risk communication; perception of risk

RESEARCH INTERESTS/BIOGRAPHY:

Darryn is a first-year PhD Student in the Department of Sociology and is working with Dr. Ralph Matthews. She is interested in the sociology of knowledge, risk communication and the perception of risk, as well as sociological studies of science and health. She holds a BA in Communication and an MA in International Development and Global Studies. In her Master's research, she worked with the Lax Kw'alaams Band in Northern British Columbia to undertake a case study analysis of the band-owned company, Coast Tsimshian Resources. She worked as a research assistant on Dr. Nathan Young's project, "Discourses of Climate Change in Canada", and her paper (co-written with Dr. Young), "Seeing Climate Change: The Visual Constructions of Global Warming in Canadian Print Media" was accepted for publication last spring in the journal Cultural Geographies.